Thoughts to words to actions

ROSEANN WEISS OCT 27, 2020 03:10PM

I am Because We are

I loved that saying and I want to create an experience for our community members to engage around this idea

Listen more.

I am a social practice artist and bring that to my work with TAF. But I need to work on bringing the voices and ideas of the community into the fold before I come up with what a "solution" looks like.

use my agency to affect change in the community

adore with not for

Action item: invite my friend's daughter to paint with me

Watch words when inviting others to the table- words used may scare others not to join.

What goals do we as artists have for the community? What areas need development? What areas need highlighting?

I liked the visual image of diverse people on bicycles and how it clarified the issue of equity.

I will meet with my guiding circle to discuss ways we might connect with other groups in the community to begin the process of building community. .

What resonated with me is Denise's discussion about being open to what you can do. For me, I would like to find more ways to teach my process of art and meditation to those in my community that are willing, wanting and able to learn a new modality of self-care...especially to our youth.

How do we define and map community? There's limitless potential for finding arts-based ways to define our community.

Ask questions rather than formulate answers.

Talk to Aylse about a project working with the people at Lafayette Transitional Housing.

Believe. Begin.
Sit. Hear. See.
